NUANCIER POUR TROUSSE
126 CDC

A large rectangular frame containing a grid of 126 small circles, arranged in 6 rows and 21 columns. Each circle is connected to a vertical line extending downwards, forming a series of small vertical bars. This is a standard color calibration tool used in printing to ensure color accuracy across different media and devices.
